

Explore Hampton Court Palace and Legoland with all the family

How long do I need? Two to three days

Where is it? Surrey and Windsor

Highlights

For a great family break, you need plenty to keep the whole party amused. Hampton Court Palace and Legoland both make an amazing day out, with plenty of attractions and rides to keep everyone in the family happy. If you have any energy left on day three you can visit Mercedes-Benz World museum – great for motor enthusiasts! Get behind the wheel of Mercedes-Benz, recapture the do-or-die spirit of Brookland's 1930s motor circuit and tour G-BBDG - the 1,350 mph Delta Golf Concorde.

Day one:

Spend the day at Hampton Court Palace beside the River Thames

The majestic highlight of the first day is a visit to Henry VIII's Hampton Court Palace, in its splendid setting beside the River Thames. This magnificent palace both awes and entertains its visitors, just as it did in Tudor times. Henry took the riverside residence from his fallen favourite, Cardinal Wolsey, and held court here in the series of rooms which we can still see today. Family trails, costumed guided tours and a variety of special activities rekindle the spirit of what life was like here under England's most colourful, much-married monarch. It's easy to picture Henry himself in the imposing Great Hall used for banquets, receptions, balls and other functions; in The Great Watching Chamber, where bodyguards were stationed to manage the ebb and flow of courtiers; in the Chapel Royal where he worshipped every day and in the sometimes chilling Haunted Gallery. The extra "presence" here could be poor Catherine Howard, Henry's fifth wife, who was dragged screaming from the Gallery after pleading with the king for her life. There's a cosier feel to the vast Tudor kitchens, built in 1530 to feed the 600 or so members of the court who were entitled to eat at the palace twice a day. Hampton Court's six acres of buildings span 500 years, so there's plenty more to come. In the 17th century, William III and Queen Mary commissioned Sir Christopher Wren to rebuild the palace; Wren wanted to demolish all but the Great Hall, but had to be content instead with creating the wonderful series of State Apartments which we can visit, but the King and Queen did not live to enjoy. With the famous maze, wonderful formal gardens and 700-acre deer park, the grounds of the palace are an outing in themselves. The maze alone consists of half a mile of baffling paths: allow about 20 minutes to reach the centre.

Hampton Court Palace is located on the A308 and is well signposted from all the major local roads; there is limited parking at the palace. Trains from London Waterloo run twice an hour, journey time 35 minutes. Westminster Passenger Services (tel: +44 (0)207 9302062) operate riverboats in the summer from Westminster, Richmond-upon-Thames and Kingston-upon-Thames. Turks Launches (tel: +44 (0)208 5462434) operate services from Richmond and Kingston.

It was at Runnymede, in 1215, that the Magna Carta was sealed by King John – the historic Great Charter of English liberty which limited the monarch's high-handed behaviour. This momentous occasion is marked by a memorial in the lovely natural landscape of Runnymede Meadow, on a slope above the River Thames. The memorial to President John F Kennedy is close by and the Air Forces Memorial, which commemorates airmen of the Second World War, is at the top of the slope. You can walk to the memorials from the hotel in about 25 minutes, following the Thames Path National Trail along the river. The site is owned by the National Trust and can be visited all the year round, free of charge. The Magna Carta Tea Room (not NT) is also open all year, except December 24 – 26. Opening times vary from 8.30 – 17.30 in summer to 9.00 – 16.30 in winter (11.00 – 15.00 on New Year's Day.)

Time to spare? Hire an electric boat for an hour, from private moorings at the runnymede-on-thames hotel. The covered boats seat six people, with plenty of room for a picnic basket. You can putter along the river for an hour without going through locks. If you decide to venture further, any necessary guidance is provided.
